

and the world (she) conquered they told her she wasn't good enough she believed their opinions were far from true

and she saw darkness in their words too ugly and broken was the society she lived in

and so

she changed the world
herself

she cut off the locks which chained her hands and upon her head placed a crown her smile turned frowns upside down

and darkness scattered as hope enveloped her

the world was surrounded by her light

and the world she
conquered